An exchange of thoughts and ideas between people happens every day in our society. From the thoughts within ourselves to special glances between boyfriend and girlfriend, these exchanges are all around us. Helping strangers, talking with teachers or just having fun with friends is something taken for granted.

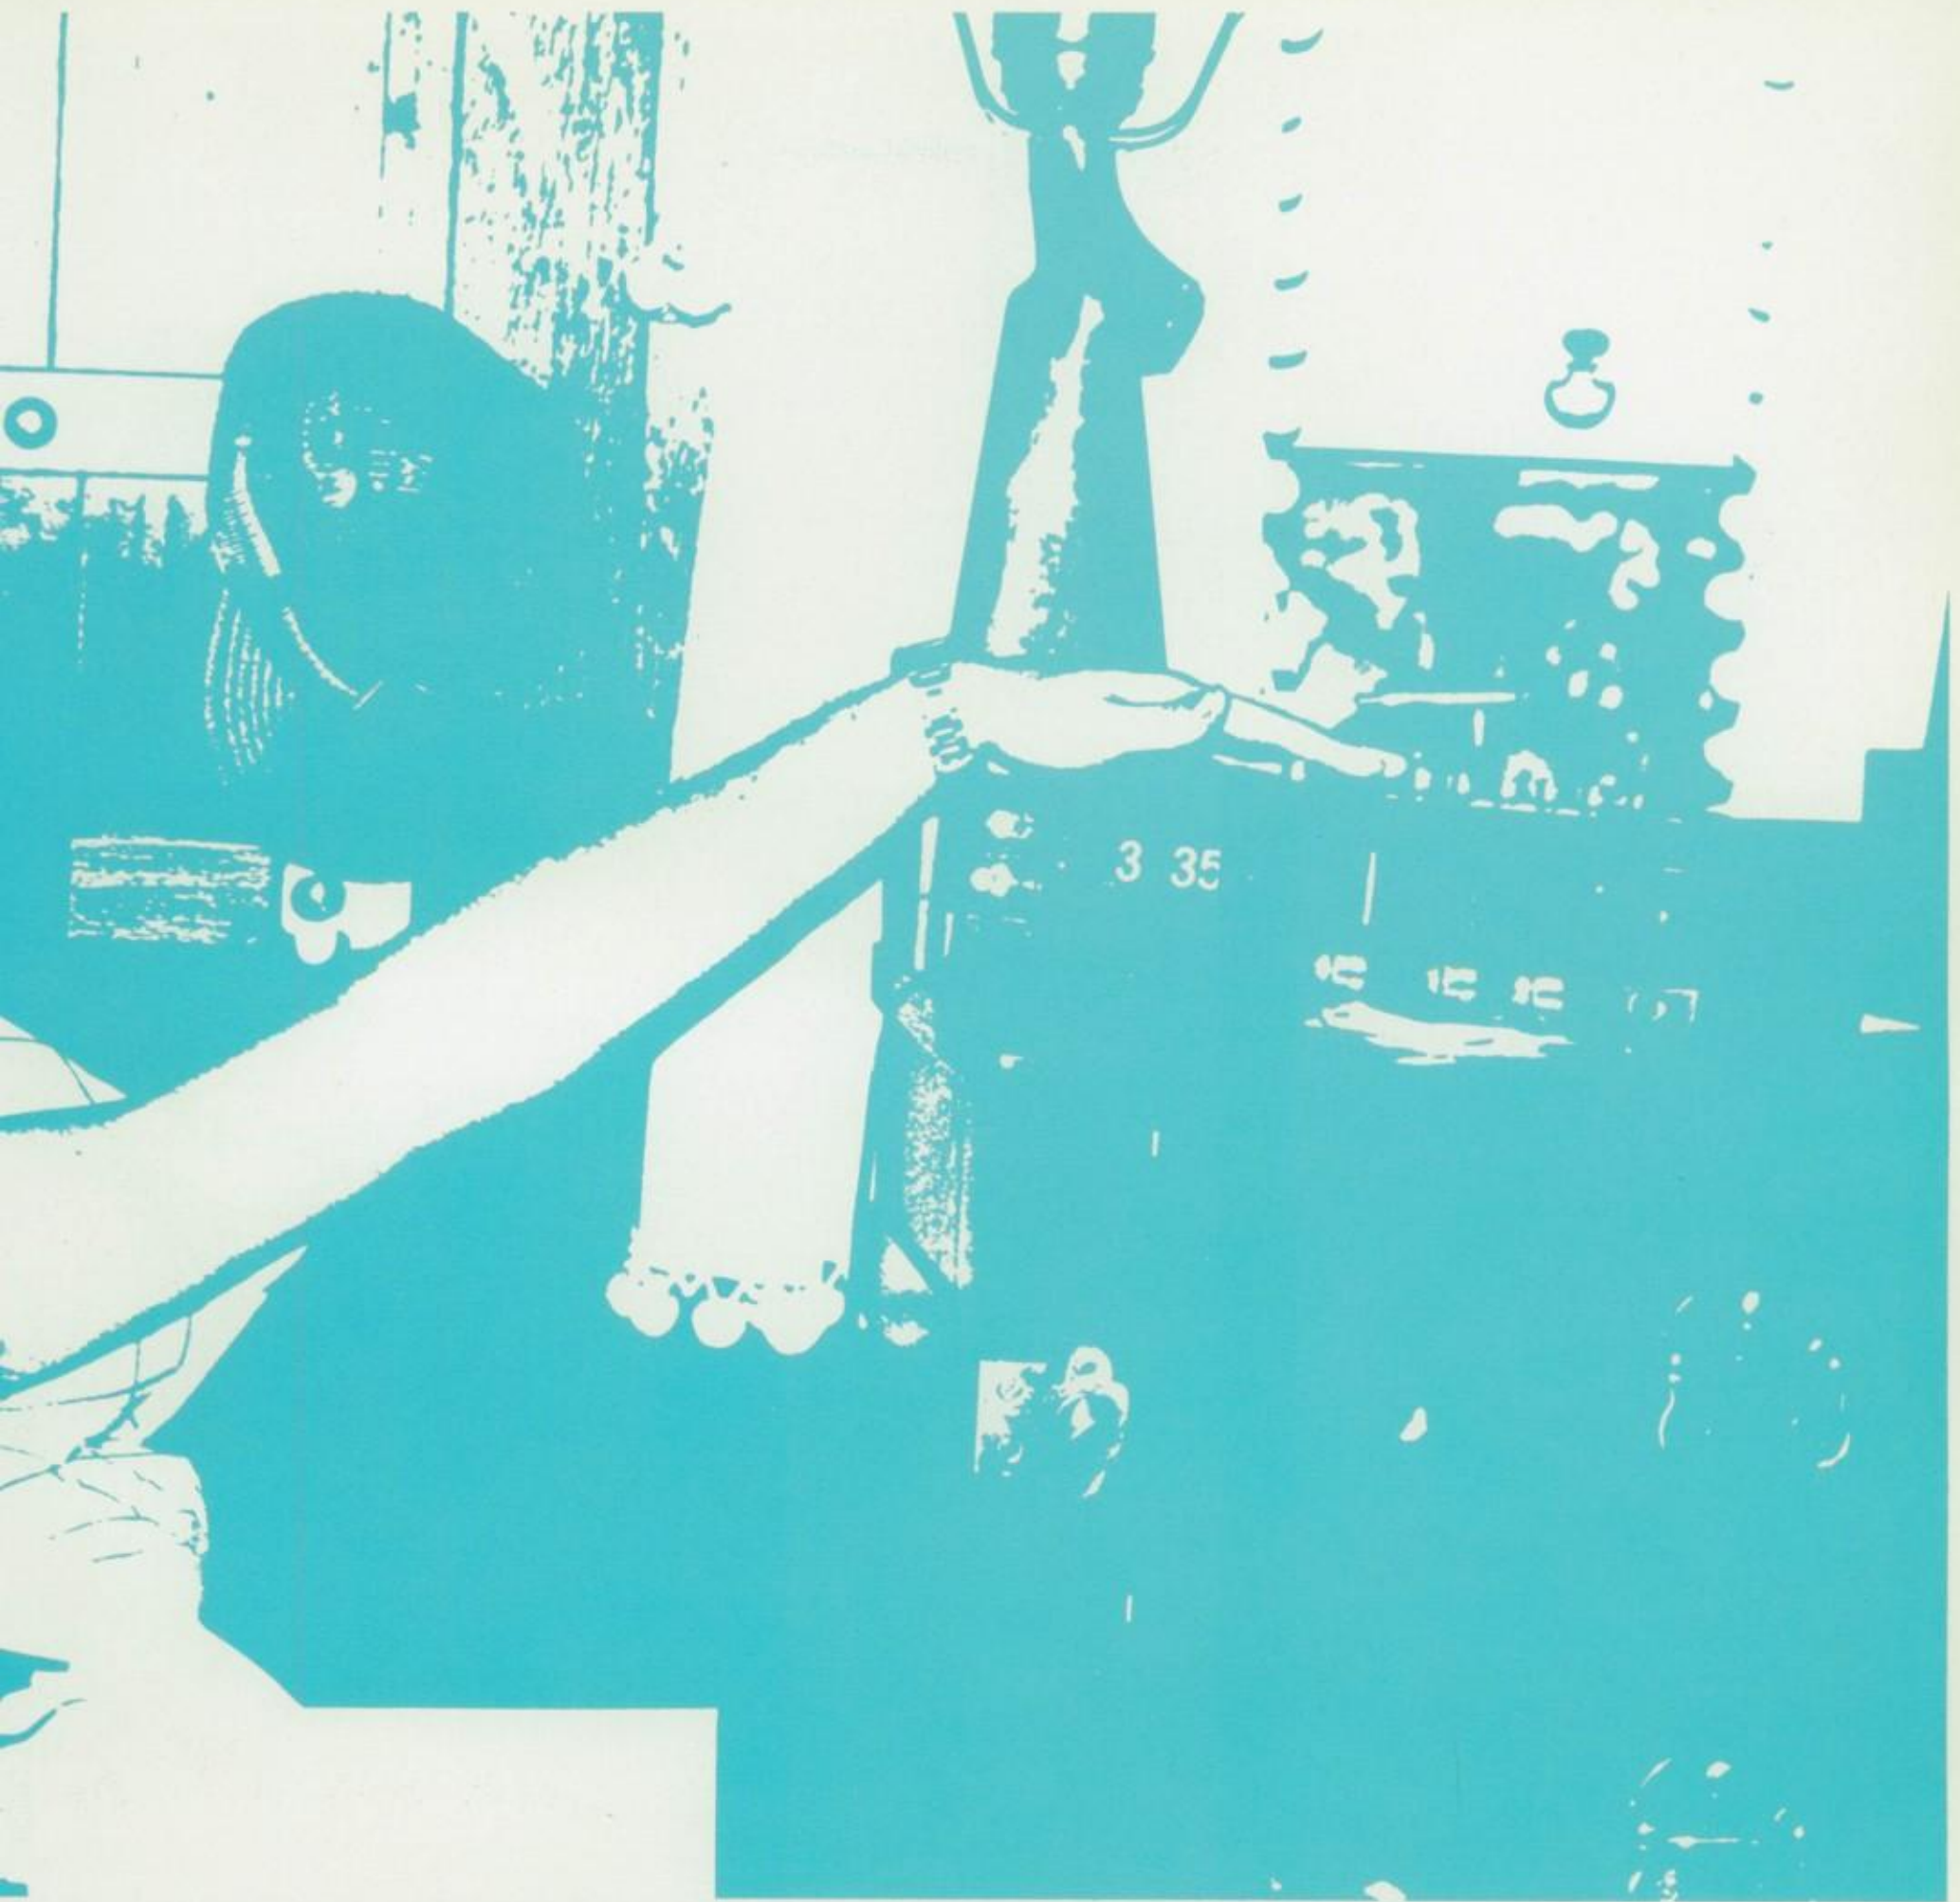

Smiles and laughter, tears and sorrow are part of our world. Disappointment would be much lonelier without friends to make us feel better; success is much happier when we have someone to share it with.

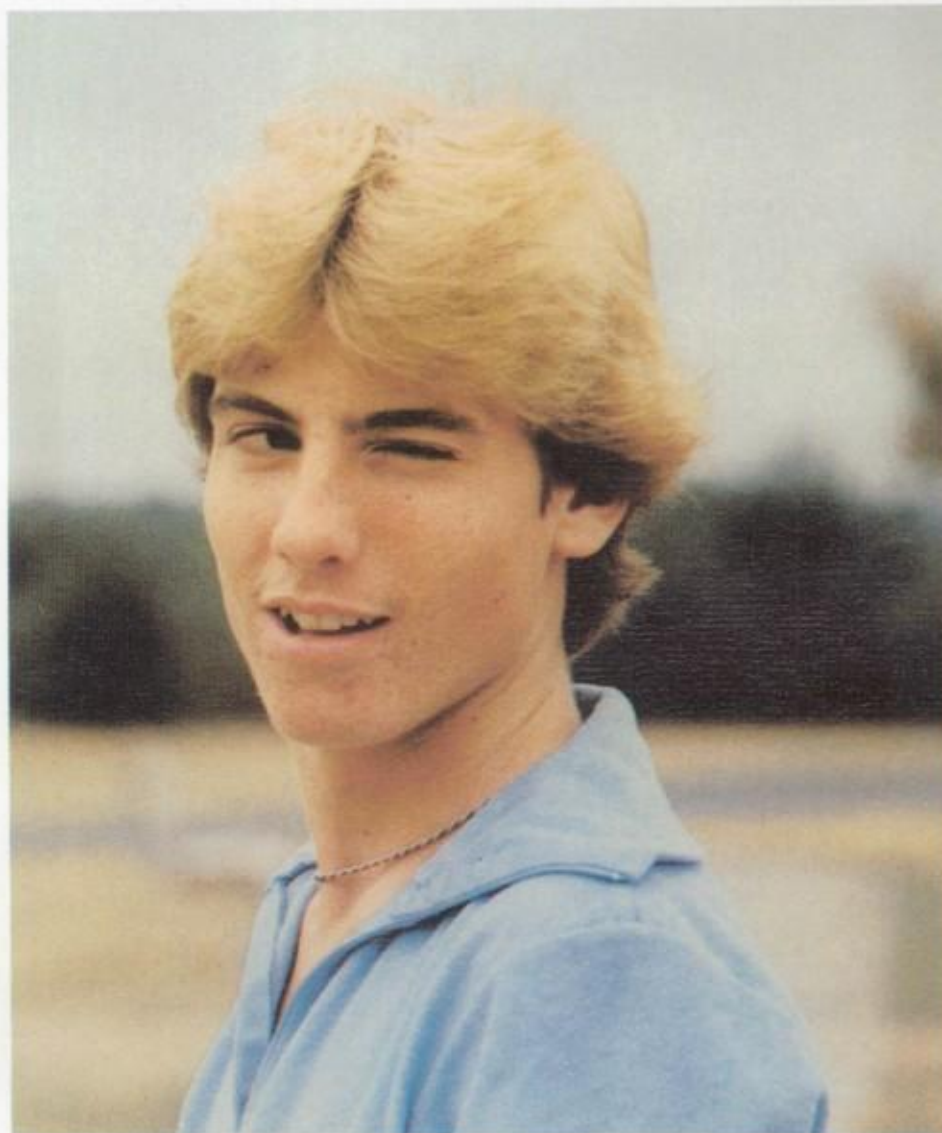

From the beginning of the day to the very end, we're encompassed by different forms of the media. The alarm clock tells us when to get up; the radio tells us to get to home-room; television lets us know what's going on in the real world as well as in the afternoon world of soap operas.

Starting the day with corn flakes and Charlie Brown and ending the week with a movie have almost become routines. Although we often take it for granted, we realize that our world would be much emptier without the media.

A relationship can begin if we just take the time to receive each other's signals. The non-verbal messages sent to us are often overlooked because we're not aware of them. They can be as subtle as a wink, a glance, or a smile, or as obvious as a handshake, a wave, or a hug. They're being hurled at us from all directions; we merely must take the time to catch them.

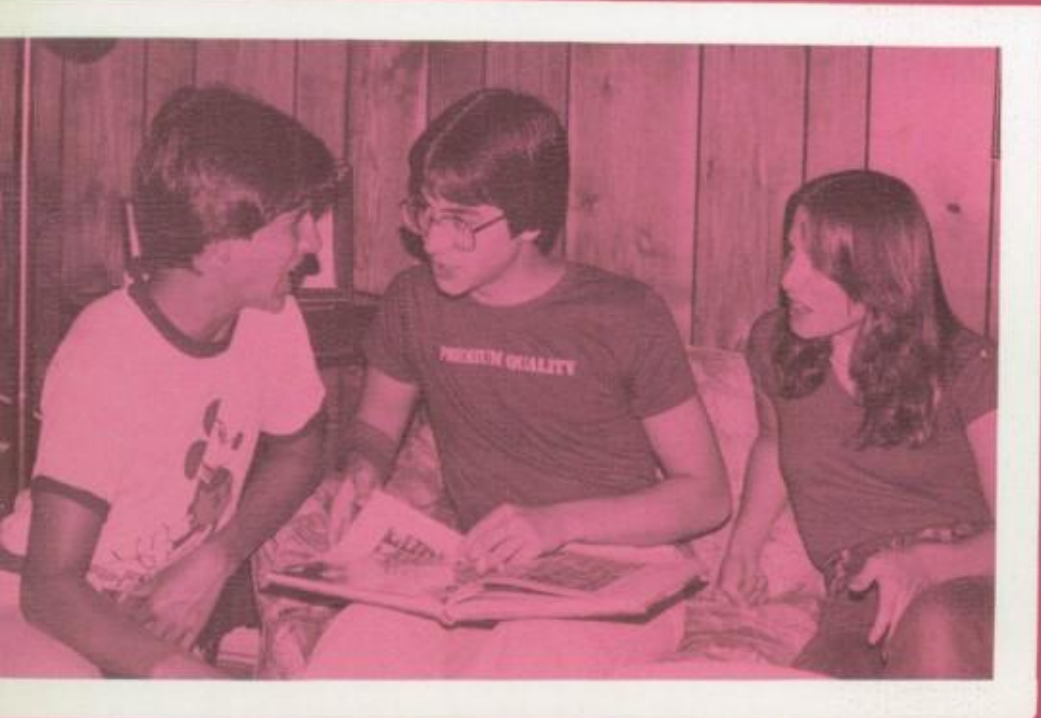

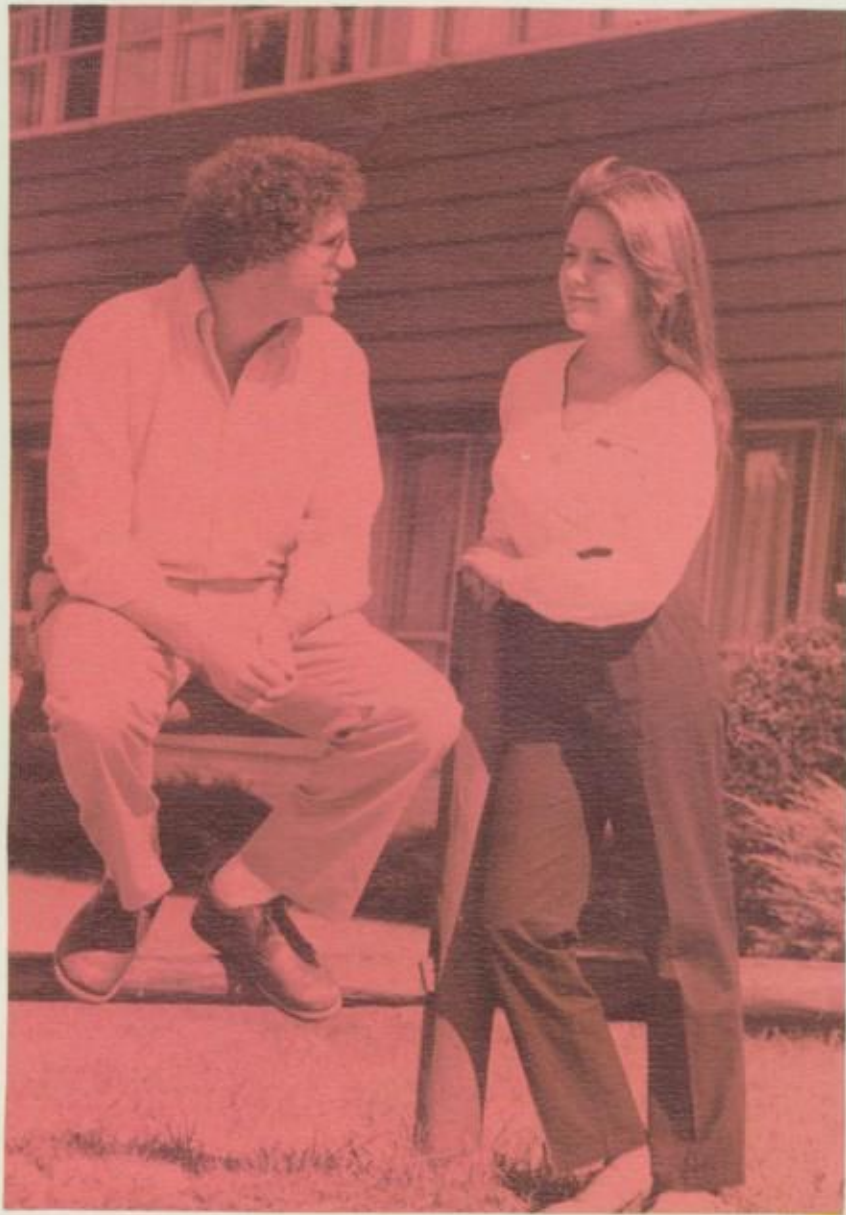

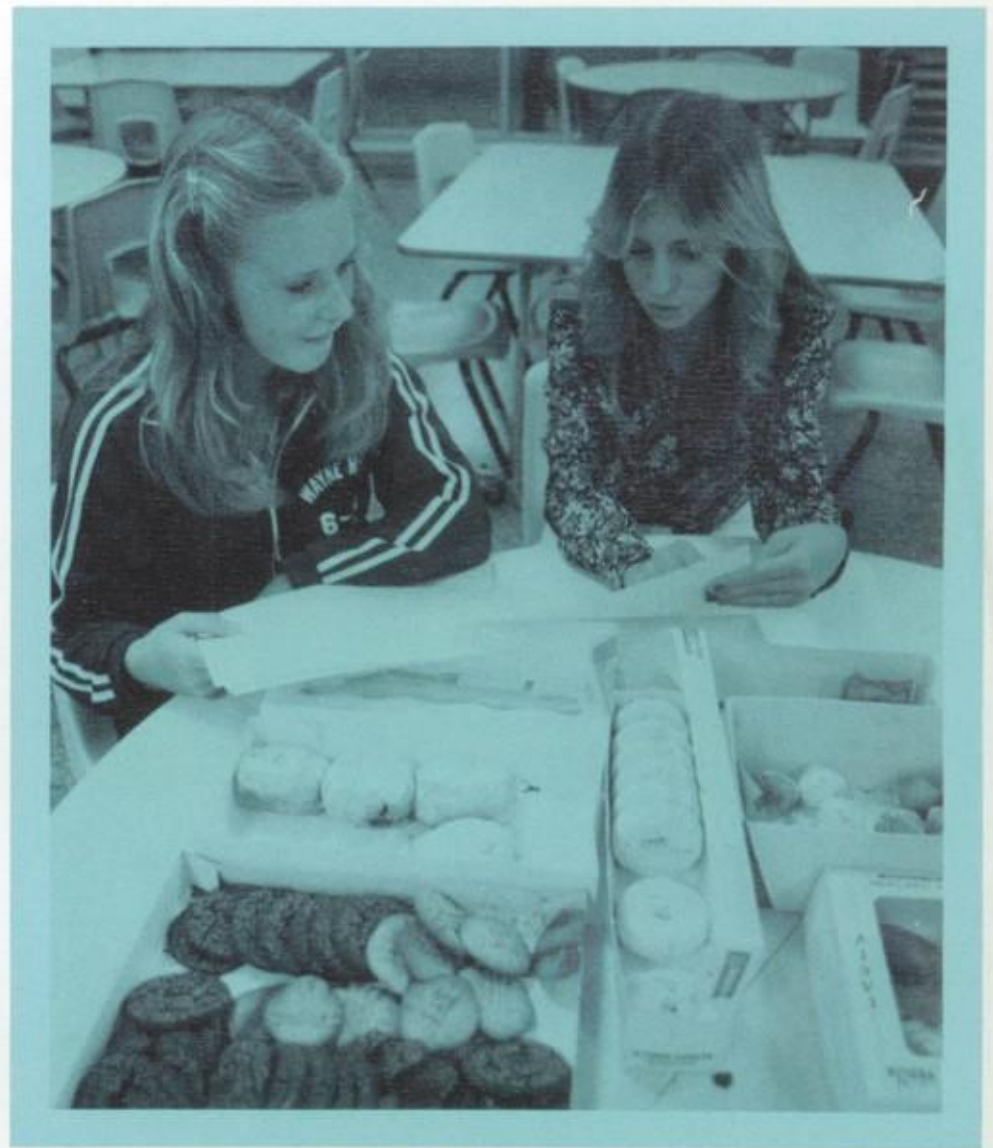

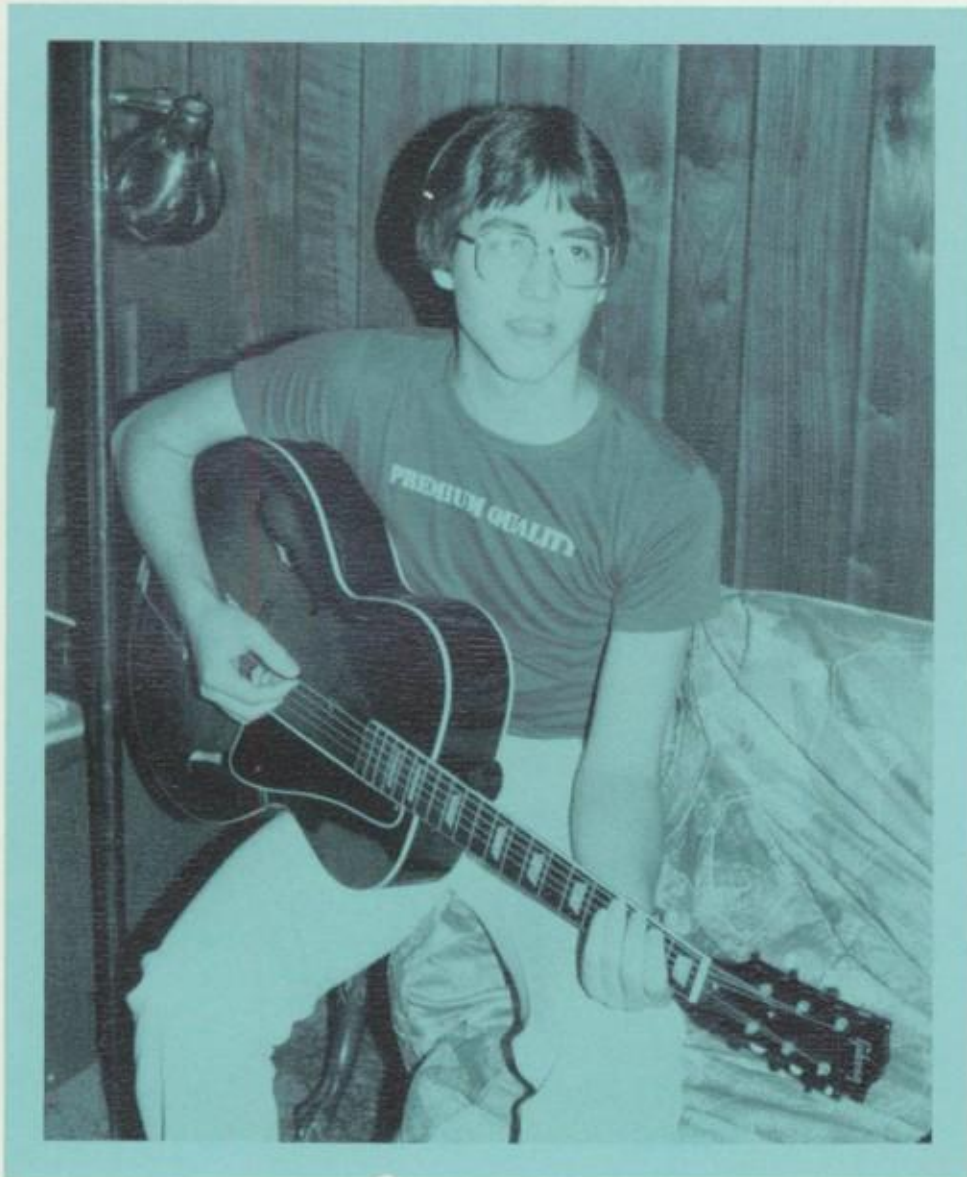

As we have grown with friends through the years, we have seen each other in many ways. We have watched our friends grow with us, and we have become closer than we ever thought possible. We have shared our long held ideas and gained new ones as we matured. When we reflect on the fun times as well as the sad times, we realize they don't have to end, but can continue as long as we keep in touch. Writing letters, telephoning and visiting each other help us to keep our friends close.

As we say, "Good-bye for now," we look forward to a new beginning, a new experience and new opportunities. Most of all, we anticipate new relationships and new opportunities to communicate.

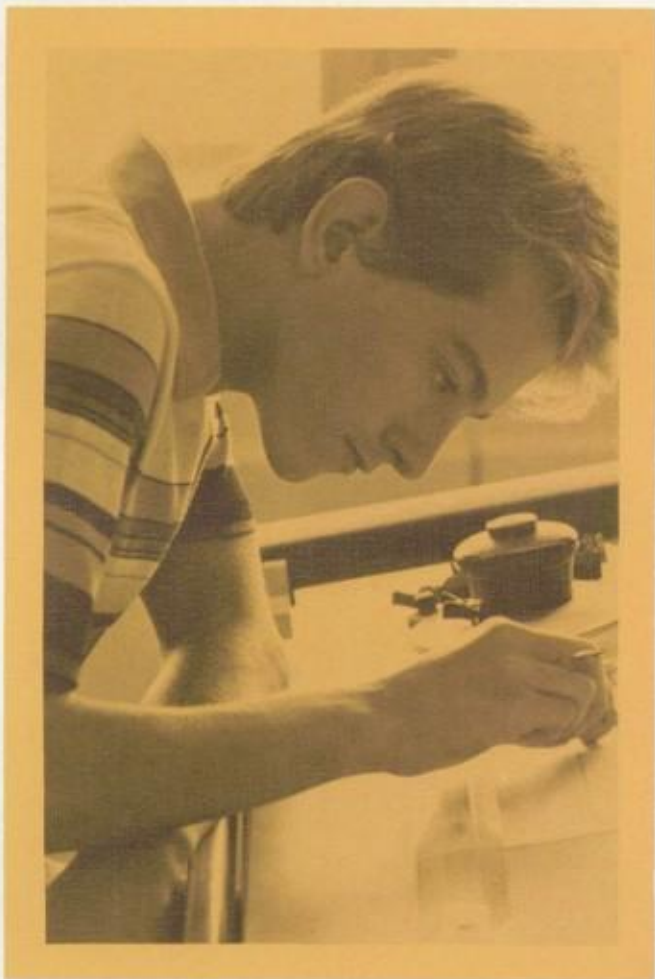

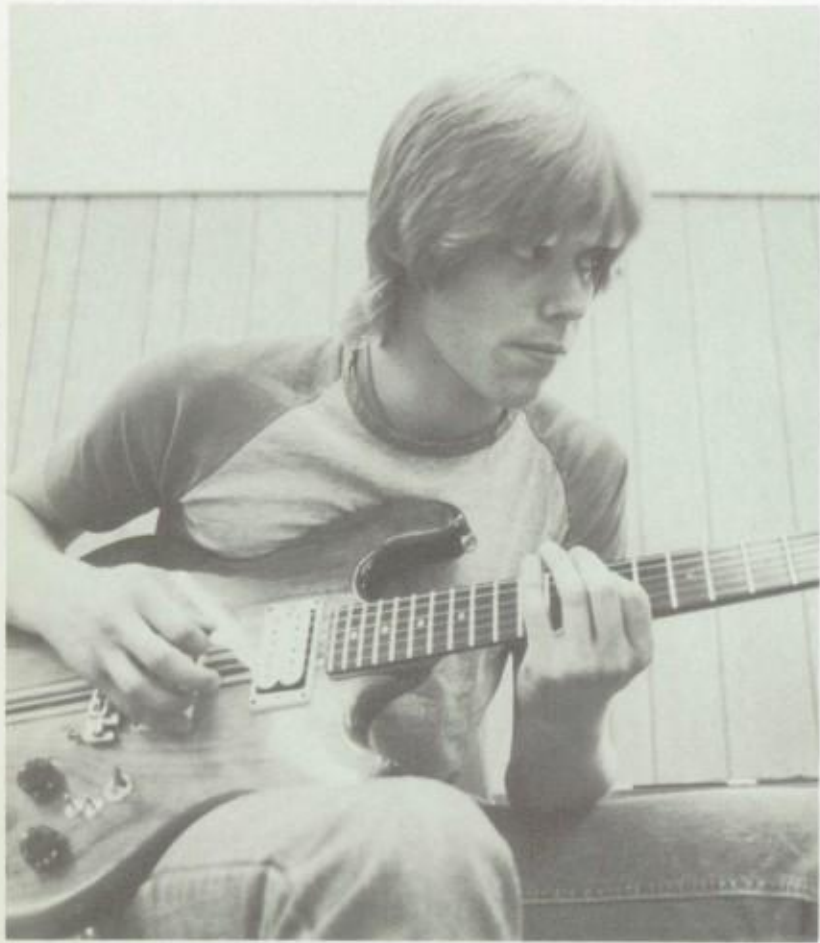

Senior — 1) of the greater age; older: often indicating the older of two having the same name, as a father and son. 2) of higher rank or standing, or long in service. 3) of or belonging to the graduating class in a high school or college.

This isn't as much fun as they think.

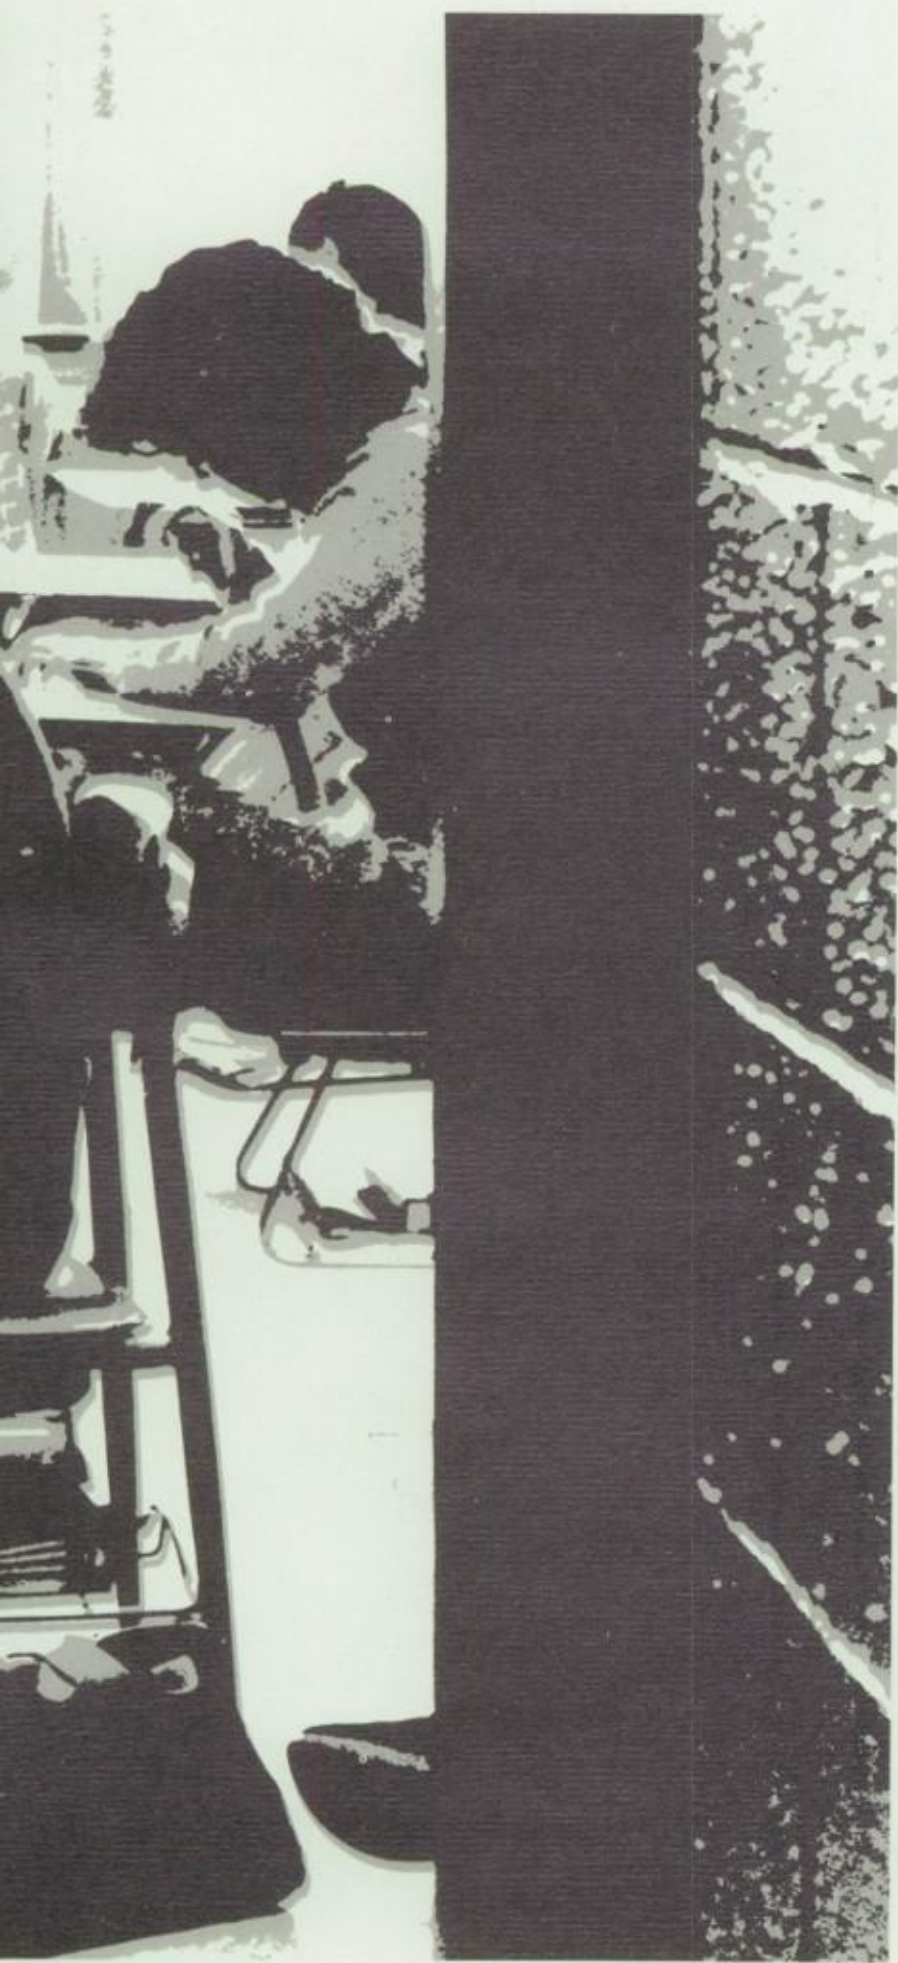

Look, Donna, it moved.

The rapport between students is a special understanding and a feeling of closeness. Being part of a group and sharing different lifestyles is an important part of our lives. Expanding our horizons and learning about people help us to prepare for the future.

Communication in the classroom need not be confined to a lecture delivered in front of a chalk board. It can be as direct as a question raised in discussion or as suggestive as a nod of agreement, as conspicuous as a raised hand or as subtle as an encouraging smile. Through words both written and spoken, formal and casual we are picking up signals and messages from our teachers, our classmates and ourselves.

COLLEGE AND CAREER NIGHT

OCTOBER 16, 1980

The exciting world of the future is brought closer to home with College and Career Night. We get a chance to browse through college brochures and get a glimpse of the opportunities offered to us by colleges and universities around the country. The wide range of careers explored gives us a chance to look at what the future holds in store for us.

The one message communicated through school activities is enjoyment. It's students doing what they like most and showing everyone how well they can do it. The number of clubs is surpassed only by the variety of students, each finding his place and telling the world "LOOK AT ME."

The field of sports is an exceptional one. It is a special world of secret communications between players. An exchange of ideas that needs no words puts sports in a class by itself.

Signals between coaches and athletes are interpreted because of an age-old understanding. Referees' signals are honored and heeded by the players. The smoothness of a team that works together like a well-oiled machine is an exciting experience to share.

Archie Sclavanounos on a break away

It was obvious from the outset that the 1980 soccer team would have a successful season when they won all three of their pre-season scrimmages. With seven returning starters, Coach Maszczak knew he had a winner. Having a league record of 17-0-1, and a county championship under their belt, the Patriots were ranked number one in the state at the end of the regular season. Finishing the season with such a spectacular record, they brought pride to the team and recognition to the school.

House of Herbs, Inc.

Sue,
Even now
Whenever I hear your name
And the world has changed so much since you've been gone,
Even now I still remember and the feeling's still the same
And this pain inside of me goes on and on,
Even now
When I have come so far,
I wonder where you are,
I wonder why it's still so hard without you.
Even now
When I come shining through,
I swear I think of you,
And how I wish you knew
Somehow-
Even now,

Forever in our hearts,
Busch

A black and white photograph of a modern high school building. The building has a light-colored, possibly concrete, facade. On the left side, there is a large, stylized sign that reads "Wayne Hills" in a script font, with "High School" in a block font below it, separated by a small graphic of a mountain. The building features a series of vertical slats or louvers along its upper section. In the foreground, there is a paved area, possibly a parking lot or driveway, and a fire hydrant is visible on the right side. The overall tone is somewhat somber due to the monochrome palette.
